There it was.....the truth slapping me right upside the head: another store receipt! And no matter how hard I tried, I couldn't ignore it, deny it, or wish it away.

My husband had bought condoms!
How in the hell can he do this to me again? I asked myself.

And how will he explain himself when I confront him about it? What will he say?

Thoughts raced through my mind at warp speed. I tried to make sense of it all. But I kept coming back to the same conclusion: my husband had cheated.

Again.

I knew I wasn't ready to hear the answer, but I damn sure had to ask.

“Malcolm, why did you buy condoms? And don't you even lie because I found the receipt!”

“Just being an asshole, I suppose.”

“Malcolm, I trusted you, even after that last time you cheated!” I screamed. “Now you've abused that trust by doing it again? How am I supposed to believe anything you say to me? How?”

“I don't know. But I swear to you, I haven't had unprotected sex with anyone else since that last incident. I might be guilty of getting a little sumthin' sumthin' on the side, and a few other things, but I haven't slept with another woman in a really long time.”

He paused, and then he went into his version of damage-control mode.

E “And even when I did,” he chastised, “at least I used condoms! Wasn’t that your complaint the last time? That I was jeopardizing your health?”

What the hell...? Oh, no he didn’t just try to flip this shit around! And for the record, Mr. Can’t-Keep-It-in-his-Pants, my complaint was that you were screwing every woman you met!

E I couldn’t believe it!

I shook my head, and tried to wrap my mind around what Malcolm was telling me. Subconsciously, I could hear my friend Sasha screaming: “Hello? Anybody in there? Wake up, Fatimah-he cheated on you! AGAIN!”

T
Malcolm’s words rang even louder. Haven’t had unprotected sex....in a really long time? I thought. Why was my husband being so careful with his words? What were these “things” he may or may not be guilty of?

And what the hell was “a little sumthin’ sumthin”?

I would soon learn that it was far more than any wife should be expected to handle.
